

This heatmap visualization displays the 2008 US Presidential election results by county. The color scale ranges from dark purple (Democrat) to bright yellow (Republican). The map shows a clear division, with the majority of the South and parts of the Midwest and West being Republican, while the Northeast, Midwest, and parts of the South are Democratic.

